Feast Day of Saint Dunstan

Red Wing, Minnesota

*And cyclists everywhere now-a-bed
Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here*

The Blessing of the Bicycles

By the Quicker Vicar

Collect & Blessing

Vicar: Remember Lord, that many of our bicycles have risen from the dead, much like yourself. Bless these our bikes, let not our hubs spew forth their gears, protect and shield our tyres from flats, let our cotter pins remain without blemish, save our thighs from unquenchable fire on the Maiden Rock Hill, and though we are not worthy, in thy mercy protect us from undue headwinds.

All: Amen

The Reading (Adapted from Shakespeare's Henry V)

Vicar: O that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England
To ride with us to-day!

Noel: What's he that wishes so?
My clergy The Vicar? No, my fair priest
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
No, wish not a man from England.
Rather proclaim it, through my host,
That he which hath no stomach to this ride,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made,
We would not ride in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to ride with us.
This day is call'd the feast of Dunstan.

He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
 Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,
 And say 'To-morrow is Saint Dunstan's.'
 Then will he raise his leg and show his scars,
 And say 'These wounds I had on Dunstan's day.'
 And he'll remember, with advantages,
 What feats he did that day. Then shall the names,
 Familiar in his mouth as household words-
 Maiden Rock Hill, Bay City Plummet,
 Sturmeay and Archer, Raleigh and Dunelt-
 Be in their flowing cups freshly rememb'red.
 And Saint Dunstan's Day shall ne'er go by,
 From this day to the ending of the world,
 But we in it shall be remembered-
 We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
 For he today that rides his steed with me
 Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
 This day shall gentle his condition;
All: And cyclists everywhere now-a-bed
 Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,
 And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
 That rode with us upon Saint Dunstan's day.

The Lenton Observance

Vicar: Remember that thou art rust, and to rust thou shalt return.

The Psalm

Adapted from King James Bible, 23rd Psalm
Please read responsively

Vicar: The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want.

Congregation: He maketh me to lie down at lunchtime:
he leadeth me beside back waters.

Vicar: He restoreth my bike:

Congregation: he leadeth me in the bikepaths of righteousness for his name's sake.

Vicar: Yea, though I ride through the valley of the Mississippi,
I will fear no evil: for thou art with me;

Congregation: thy rod brakes and thy Dynohub™ they comfort me.

Vicar: Thou preparest a table before me in the Eagle's Nest Coffeeshop:
thou anointest my chain with oil;

Congregation: now my chaincase runneth over.

Vicar: Surely goodness and Sturmey shall follow me all the days of my life:

Congregation: and I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever.

Prayers for Strength

Vicar: I lift up mine eyes unto the hills;

Congregation: from whence cometh my help?
(Psalm 121)

Vicar: Make straight roads for our feet,

Congregation: so that the feeble may not be turned out of the way, but may be made strong.
(Hebrews 12:13)

Dismissal

Vicar: Remember that life is short and we do not have much time to gladden the hearts of others, so be swift to love, make haste to be kind and go forth and ride with joy.

All: RAmen

What Would Jesus Ride?

Notes on Today's Service

Nutters who rode in 2007 may have a glimmer of recognition; haven't we done this reading before? Yes, we have. In the liturgical churches (Roman Catholic, old-line Protestant) the Lectionary specifies the cycle of readings for each Sunday throughout the year on a three-year cycle known as Years A, B & C. I've adopted this excellent practice, with the exception of feast days, such as today's Saint Dunstan's Day, where we have a special secular reading: the St. Crispin's Day speech from the play Henry V (properly, The Cronicle Hiftory of Henry fift) written by William Shakespeare, who you'd think could spell better, around 1600, nearly 200 years after the battle of Agincourt (1415) which it depicts. At Agincourt an exhausted and retreating English army beat a vastly larger French army while suffering only light casualties. It is considered one of the glorious achievements of English arms and is celebrated in the medieval Agincourt Hymn, thanking God ("Deo Gracias") for helping in the slaughter. This was part of the Hundred Years War and took place between the Somme River and Calais on the Channel coast, territory still fought over in huge, bloody battles 500 years later. The Agincourt battle happened on St. Crispin's Day, October 15, thus the common name for the speech. Westmoreland (played here by The Vicar) wished for more men to help their small army; Henry (Noel) said, no! We will win a great battle today and more's the glory for those of us who are here! Those bums back in England will feel like a bunch of woosies as long as any of us are around!, although it's a little more eloquently put than that. You can see the speech on film delivered by Lawrence Olivier (1944) or Kenneth Branagh (1989). It has often been referenced in other productions, including the title of the HBO World War II series Band of Brothers and in the final Black Adder episode parodied as "We few, we happy few, we band of ruthless bastards." The speech was shortened and adapted for the Blessing and May 19 happens to be St. Dunstan's Day, which fits nicely into the rhythm and rhyme. St. Dunstan was the Archbishop of Canterbury from 960 to 988AD. He had doubts about religious orders because he didn't think the celibate life would suit him, but then he came down with a horrible skin disease and, it being easy for ugly people to remain celibate, became a priest. He served several English kings ending with Ethelred the Unready, wrote the service for crowning the monarch in much the same form it's used today, worked as a blacksmith, goldsmith, painter and jeweler and is the patron saint of goldsmiths. While St. Crispin/Crispian (thought to be twins, both shoemakers, preached Christianity in Gaul and beheaded for their efforts in 286AD) were removed from the Roman Catholic sainthood by the Vatican II council due to doubts as to their existence and suspicions that they actually represented a pagan Celtic diety (Lugus-Mercurius), St. Dunstan persists. The nearest church named after him is the extremely traditional Saint Dunstan's Anglican Church in Saint Louis Park, Minnesota. The Lenton Observance is a nod to the Raleigh Lentons, a model of bicycle, named after the street in which the Raleigh works were located. Good thing they weren't on 27th Avenue South. The Psalm (23rd) is adapted from the King James Version of the Bible (first issued 1611, most commonly cited edition is the 1769). This was an update of the first translations of the Bible into English using the new medium of print, a controversial political as well as religious act at the time, by William Tyndale. The Roman Catholic authorities looked upon this with disfavor and had him strangled and burned at the stake on 6 October 1536. The hymn "I Sing a Song of the Chaps on Bikes" is an adaptation of "I Sing a Song of the Saints of God" by Lesbia Scott, the wife of a Royal Navy officer who wrote the song for her own children. She published a book of her own hymns for children in 1929. This tune was written by a retired American Episcopal priest, made it into the American Armed Forces hymnal and the Episcopal 1940 hymnal and became a much beloved hymn although it is virtually unknown in the UK despite all the lanes and tea stuff. "Remember that thou art rust" is a one-letter adaptation of a bit from the Episcopal Ash Wednesday service, a useful reminder that our time here is limited. The final "RAmen" at the close of the service is our interdenominational nod to Pastafarians, those who believe in the Flying Spaghetti Monster and think they have been touched by His Noodly Appendage. The chainring on the front cover is from a Rudge; this particular image is taken from Bike Cult's website (www.bikecult.com) and its excellent Chainring Archive. The actual Crankifix used in today's service was crafted by the ingenious Peter Martin using a Rudge crankset. The Vicar Matthew Cole was ordained by the Universal Life Church following a rigorous screening process consisting mostly of making sure he had a valid email account. The shirts he bought at the Saint Paul Seminary. The Vicar is available for weddings and ~~Bar Mitzvahs~~. In actual life, Matt's wife Karla is the Music Director at Saint Christopher's Episcopal Church in Roseville, Minnesota, where Matt sings in the choir most Sundays in season, early September to early June, except tomorrow.
